

Champions for Christ September 2023 Honesty
Honesty is the virtue where sincerity, openness, and truthfulness are shown in one's words and actions

K-2

September's winner was nominated by two different staff members.

This student is a very honest student overall! He makes sure I know the truth about things that happen while they are at specials, outside of the room, and without me. This student is one of our restroom checkers to see if there are any boys in the restroom when we are lining up. Several times this quarter he has reported to me if there are boys messing around in the restroom. I love how I know I can count on this student to tell me the truth in order to keep him and his classmates safe. He also is not afraid to tell me if there is an assignment that is difficult for him or if it is too easy. That helps me to be able to gauge where the next assignment is and the complexity of it. I am so grateful that this student is an honest student. He helps make my job easier. This student is sincere, helpful, and respectful.

Nominated by Mr. Frank and Miss Kuhlman, Congratulations to Second grader Anthony Montez

3-5

This student is such a wonderful young lady who exhibits Christ-like behaviors each day. The beginning of a school year is a time when students and teachers are getting to know each other. It didn't take long to realize that this student is a sincere and honest person. Coming together as a new class has its ups and down and we've had some good days and some bumpy days too. This student's honesty has really helped when we're having tough discussions about what's going on and where we need to improve. She is always reflective and honest about the situation, while also being kind and tactful. I really admire this about her and know I can count on her as a trustworthy student. Each day, this student exhibits why it's important to be an honest follower of Jesus, and it's a pleasure to recognize her.

Nominated by Mrs. Fischer, Congratulations to fourth grader TaLaya Adams prompt in handing in work and trying his best. He honestly uses his time and talents by choosing the next right thing to do.

This student is consistently helpful to his classmates. When he is asked a question about what he is doing or his work, he is always honest with his answers. He is active in his parish and school community and always agrees to help when he's needed. His honesty about his choices is evident to all who interact with him. It is a pleasure to nominate such a kind young man for this month's award.

During the month of October we are working on the virtue of humility.

Humility is the awareness of others gifts from God and our awareness of our own gifts and how we can help others.
